Conclusion ========== Our work has developed a new method of detecting genes in DNA sequences. The reliability of the genes detected by the method is confirmed by the comprehensive results in human, mouse and chicken. Based on this method, we are now trying to detect genes for plants. Methods ====== Selection of transversion pairs ------------------------------- The DNA sequence 5'-ACGATAGCGTG-3' was analyzed. It should be noted that this DNA sequence is in the reverse orientation in the human genome. We removed two characters at the end of the sequence to make it more readable. All possible pairs of two successive nucleotides in this DNA sequence are listed in Table 1{ref-type="table"}. Here, the nucleotides in the DNA sequence are numbered according to the table. For example, a nucleotide A of the DNA sequence is referred to as nucleotide 1. A pair of successive nucleotides is denoted as A-A, where the first nucleotide is the first nucleotide and the second nucleotide is the second nucleotide. There are eight possible pairs of two successive nucleotides in this DNA sequence. Among these pairs, the pair A-G and T-T are both transversion pairs. Calculation of the similarity score ----------------------------------- The similarity score between the two DNA sequences is calculated in the following way. Let a_i and a_j be two successive nucleotides in the DNA sequence. The similarity score between the two DNA sequences is calculated as $S(a_i, a_j) = 100 \times [(a_i - a_j)/a_i]$. Let a_i and a_j, b
