(Unknown). 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to the transmission of digital data over a wireless communication channel, and more particularly to a method and apparatus for performing multiple receivers for a wireless communication system employing orthogonal frequency division multiplexing (OFDM). 2. Description of the Related Art Wireless communication systems transmit digital data over a communication channel, wherein the transmitted data is received at a receiver, such as a mobile receiver. The receiver demodulates the received data to recover the transmitted data. The transmitted data includes information symbols that are combined in a predetermined manner to form a signal to be transmitted over the communication channel. The receiver receives a wireless communication signal over the communication channel, which typically includes a large number of narrowband subchannels, or "subcarriers." The receiver filters the received wireless communication signal to recover the signal in each subchannel. The receiver demodulates the filtered subchannels to recover the information symbols in the subchannels. The receiver combines the information symbols in each subchannel to recover the original information symbols that were transmitted over the communication channel. The receiver can recover a transmitted signal using a variety of techniques. The receiver can employ a number of well known decoding techniques. For example, in a technique known as turbo decoding, a turbo decoder iteratively decodes the transmitted information symbols. For this technique, the turbo decoder utilizes soft-information data, which is also referred to as extrinsic 2d92ce491b
