Watch Ip Man 3 movie online Hoge = stand up Stand up comedy is a form of stand up comedy in which the comedian performs routines on his or her own, using only a microphone and a makeshift stage at a club, bar, or similar venue, including karaoke bars, street corners, or taverns. The term “stand up” is also used in a more general sense to refer to any stand up comedian (not necessarily performing at a stage). There are three types of stand up comedians: 1) the generalist, who does not specialize in any particular type of material. For example, Steve Martin and Jerry Seinfeld are generalists. 2) the specialist, who does specialise in one or more types of material, but not necessarily in just one topic (i.e. the topic might be the subject of the joke, but that might be only one of the topics). For example, Steven Wright is a specialist in jokes about sports. 3) the expert, who does specialise in one or more types of material, and makes specific expertise of one or more topics of those types (i.e. the topic might be the subject of the joke, but that is only one of the topics). For example, Dave Attell is an expert in jokes about the film industry, and tells many specific stories from his career. Some stand up comedians are also improvisers. An improviser is someone who improvises the set before the show (and some are also able to improvise during the show), while other stand up comedians will have a pre-written set (and some improvise during the show). It is often difficult to make a distinction between generalists and specialists, as it is relatively uncommon for a stand up comedian to completely avoid one subject matter type. (Jerry Seinfeld has been dubbed
