Changes in erythrocyte rheologic properties in healthy elderly women. The influence of the menopause and aging on the erythrocyte (E) morphology and erythrocyte rheology were investigated. E were prepared from the peripheral blood of five women, each ranging from 50 to 59 yr of age and of five postmenopausal women, each ranging from 52 to 61 yr. Morphologic characteristics of E were assessed using electron microscopy, and rheologic properties were assessed using the Coulter model R-3000. The morphology of erythrocytes from women of 50 to 59 yr revealed neither spicules nor alterations, but E from postmenopausal women showed spicules, with large and medium types in ratio 3:1. E from premenopausal women displayed a greater deformability (lower viscosity index) than postmenopausal women. In addition, in premenopausal women, the presence of spicules was associated with a greater deformability (lower viscosity index), as was evidenced in E from women of 50 to 59 yr. While the country's largest political party is gearing up for the Lok Sabha polls, its head, Amit Shah, has hardly been out of the headlines recently. Shah is accused of anti-Muslim violence in Gujarat, which was supposed to be kept off the electoral agenda. Among the many controversies to have surfaced around the PM's security chief and his alleged complicity in the post-Godhra riots — when a Hindu mob burnt down a train that carried Muslims — is that he was missing during the communal riots in Delhi in 1984, when the anti-Sikh riots ensued. What has left the Prime Minister quite unsettled are the leaks in the media of the audio-visual tapes which allegedly showed Shah and BJP leaders with Rahul Gandhi — when he was the Congress president and UPA Chairperson — as the communal riots in Gujarat broke out in 2002. In the last few days, the Congress, being the architect of the current coalition, has been trying to stitch up differences between the BJP and the Modi government. Having had an uneasy relationship with the Modi government on some of the key issues, the Congress is now trying to cash in on the “crony capitalism” charges levelled by the BJP against the PM and Shah. One of the Congress leaders handling the constituency is Abhishek Manu Singh
