KARACHI: A Christian couple have been brutally murdered after being attacked by two gunmen in the oil town of Dadu near Karachi, the interior minister said on Monday. Interior Minister Shehryar Afridi told Dawn that Zakia Khan and her husband Rehmat were murdered when they were returning from a bakery in Dadu on Monday night. Afridi said that the couple's son Mohammad, who was the only witness to the killing, had told authorities that two gunmen had attacked their family on the basis of their religion. Another 10 people were injured in the attack. Police said that two gunmen had opened fire at the couple on a motorcycle, and that a bullet went through Zakia Khan's stomach, but she managed to crawl away. Police said that the attackers managed to flee with Mohammad. Father to the two victims, Mr Rehmat, said his daughter and son-in-law had been attacked near the Sufi Siparia shrine, where there was celebration going on at the time. The couple tried to save Mohammad's life, but he died later in hospital. Karachi police director SSP Nasir Khan said police were tracing the assailants. "The accused will be caught within 24 hours. The police and the family have identified the accused," Khan said. According to the Christian advocacy group, the Advocates Club for Legal Assistance, there has been a spike in attacks on Christians living in and around the city over the past month. The Advocates Club said that on July 22, a Christian man and his two sons, who belonged to a prominent family in Madar Town, were shot dead. The attackers said they were being targeted for practising Christianity. The Interior Minister ba244e880a
