Peripheral vessels play an important role in the response to hemorrhagic shock \[@cit0005]. The impairment of the endothelium-dependent vasodilatory response in older animals indicates a limited ability to regulate vascular tone, which may be associated with an increased likelihood of vasoconstriction. According to Mas and Azarbal (1995) \[@cit0005], the decreased response to ADO in older animals may be related to a lower expression of ADO receptors or an enhanced resistance to ADO.
