World War II In Color 50th Anniversary Edition. A must-see colorization of one of the greatest events of all time: a war that took the lives of more than 50 million people, including some of the greatest figures in human history. "The colorized footage the makers recovered from three poorly colored TV shows and seven newsreels have been combined into one 1080p full-frame video file, then passed through color correctors, that puts the eyes on a level with history". "of a total of more than 87,000 color film frames, the most precious of which are those from the Western Front and the Soviet Union, provide a sense of how the war looked to the men who were part of it". The world's foremost experts, many returning to the material for the first time, describe the unfolding drama with intimate detail in these never-before-seen movies. "We had a dream, and that was to make a World War II documentary in color," says Bill Kovach, a historian and founder of New York City's Alliance To Remember, which collected colorization footage for the project. "You can feel the horror, the emotions, and the battle that was happening. It's powerful." Through archived footage and firsthand accounts, the film follows several of the 20th Century's most iconic characters and delves into their fates during the most critical moments of the war. "This is film about real human beings," said director Steven Spielberg. "The courage, drama, and madness of World War II."
