What should I do? I am using Ubuntu 14.04 but I can't find a way to read a printer from a network shared printer. What should I do? Thanks A: This happened to me as well. The solution is quite simple, and straight forward. First, you must ensure that the system knows about the printer. To do this, install the cups-filters-extra package. Next, you must ensure that it knows about the network printer. To do this, you must add an entry to

/etc/cups/printers.conf. Here is what my file looks like: [printers] files = @PRINTER_LIST@ browse = @BROWS
