Max Domi has been out, while Tomas Tatar is up, with Alexander Radulov also seeming to be on the radar. And now, apparently, he wants a change of scenery, as this tweet from Bob McKenzie indicates: Not sure if this means #Canadiens head to the #KHL or not, but #Habs GM Marc Bergevin recently been tweeting about talking to #Isles GM Mike Milbury about a possible trade. — Bob McKenzie (@TSNBobMcKenzie) April 5, 2017 Milbury was a former NHL goaltender (he's now on the Islanders bench as an assistant GM), and he's been working as an agent, including being the lawyer for Max Domi when the 24-year-old was trying to get a contract extension from the New York Islanders. Milbury was also the lead negotiator for the New Jersey Devils, and he's been doing that work for clients in Russia as well. McKenzie previously wrote that the Habs and Lightning have discussed a Radulov trade, and Bergevin has been in contact with Anaheim GM Bob Murray, about Mike Richards. Bergevin, along with Ottawa's Pierre Dorion, have been busy talking to teams about the availability of players, and trades, and there are quite a few options out there. Richards is the most coveted of those, and could be moved in a relatively short time window

[Scenarios of health in the city of São Paulo, Brazil, 2000-2015]. The study aimed at evaluating scenarios of health by means of segmentation of the population in a municipality in the period of 2000 to 2015. The study involved all adult inhabitants in a municipality in the state of São Paulo, Brazil, with the support of a Geographic Information System (GIS). We used the kernel method to segment the adult population according to health profiles. The study population was divided into four profiles: very good, very bad, average, and worst. Analyses were conducted to identify demographic, economic, and health variables related to each profile. In 2000, the city of São Paulo had 67% of very good and 33% very bad health profiles. By 2015, there were more average health profiles (53.4%), but the number of very good health profiles decreased to 32.7%. The population living in very bad health profiles grew by over 31.3%. The population living in very good health profiles, on average, was lower than the
