KEYMACRO Length: Size: 82 x 74 Color Type: True Color Transparent Background: Yes Transparent Text: No Object Type: Icon Size: 24x24 The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Echinacea and given the cultivar name 'Purple Panda'. Echinacea is in the family Asteraceae. The new cultivar is part of a planned series of cultivars for use in ornamental beds. Individual cultivars are sold under the name 'Purple Panda'. This new cultivar originated from a cross between the proprietary, unreleased breeding selection identified as '2-21-2-1' (unpatented) and an unidentified seedling in a controlled breeding program in August of 2009 in Enkhuizen, The Netherlands. Compared to Echinacea 'Purple Panda', U.S. Plant Pat. No. 24,265, the new cultivar has purple ray florets and a more dense, mounded growth habit. This new cultivar has been reproduced only by asexual propagation (cuttings and tissue culture). Each of the progeny exhibits identical characteristics to the original plant. The apparent horticultural characteristics of this cultivar were determined and are stable and reproduced true to type in successive generations. Expression and physiological regulation of Ca²⁺-calmodulin-dependent protein kinase II in normal and leukemic blast cells. We examined the expression and regulation of Ca²⁺-calmodulin-dependent protein kinase II (CaMKII) in normal and leukemic blast cells using a cell culture system. The level of activity of CaMKII in T cells was shown to be constitutively active with the addition of Ca²⁺ alone. The cells were less active in the presence of calmodulin alone. In order to demonstrate the presence of a Ca²⁺-calmodulin system, the cells were also incubated with 10 microM calmidazolium (R24571). The level of CaMKII activity was reduced to the same level as that seen in the absence of calmodulin. The level of CaMKII activity in normal lymphocytes was significantly higher than that of normal blood cells. Furthermore, the expression of CaMKII was higher in leukemic blast cells than in normal blast cells. The levels of CaMK 1d6a3396d6

The sizes of files are not important (large or small), as long as the icons are well-formed. Some software, such as Photoshop, doesn't recognize the icons properly and will not resize and place them correctly. The resolution is also not important, but try to keep your icons around the size of 72 x 72 pixels, and no bigger than 1024 x 1024 pixels. This way you can use them in different sized windows, as the icons have transparent areas and can be scaled to fit the window. The total file size of icons must be less than 1MB (some are already compressed). When placing icons on the page, you can use a stock image hosting site like tinypic or imageshack.
