Watch Kalyug 5000 Full Movie in Hindi Dubbed.. You would be welcomed with a good dubbing as the title of the film..Q: How to programmatically check if object is null and if it is, set to default value if I have an object (a server) and I want to check if it is null and if it is, set to default object (e.g. null) as if not null, assume it is the current (current) state of the server. I've thought something like: public String tempState = ""; public void method() { if( server.tempState == null ){ // if `server.tempState` is null, set it to current server.tempState = "something"; } } A: You can use the getter/setter for doing this: public void setServer(Server server) { this.server = server; } public Server getServer() { return this.server; } This allows you to use the getter and setter to check if the value of the server has changed. A: You could have a default value on the object. The code could be: public String tempState = ""; public void method() { if( server.tempState == null ){ server.tempState = this.tempState; // default value in case null } } Q: Laravel Eloquent: convert result set into single object So if I have this: $tuple = array( 'user' => array(1), 'company' => array(2), 'project' => array(3) ); I can do this to create one big object: $new = new $class(); $new->user = $tuple['user']; $new->company = $tuple['company']; $new->project = $tuple['project']; I think this is the general idea d0c515b9f4
